

About Harcum College

Small class size and individual attention are at the heart of the Harcum experience. Since its founding in 1915, this focus on the individual and a combination of practical, experiential education and the liberal arts has made Harcum a leader among the nation's 2-year colleges. Formerly a women's college, Harcum now welcomes men and women of varied ages, nations, cultures and social backgrounds. Our student body is diverse and accomplished.

Harcum is known for its outstanding programs in the allied health sciences. It is also known for quality career programs in business, interior and fashion design, early childhood education, criminal justice and legal studies. Harcum is also a leader in distance education, with the first online program in neurodiagnostics in the nation, and Pennsylvania's only online program in medical laboratory technology. We constantly review our programs to ensure they meet your needs. We believe in the holistic approach to education and have created a living/learning environment at our Bryn Mawr, PA campus that offers many opportunities for individual participation and development. Many of our students transfer to four-year colleges and universities upon graduation. Of Harcum graduates who enter the job market, most find employment soon after graduation.

About Harcum Students

We have a diverse student population ranging from students who are just beginning their career to students who have worked for years but are pursuing a career change or just an upgrade in their education level. Although a majority of students are local, other students attend Harcum from other states and countries. For some students, Harcum is their means to start a career right out of college. Meanwhile, other students are planning to transfer to a four-year college to attain additional education or a bachelor's degree.

There isn't a "student mold" here at Harcum. Each student is their own individual yet they all end up with an excellent education that provides opportunities based on their personal goals and desires. It is time that you met your first Harcum student.
